Interview: Dr. Bruce Jette, Army acquisition chief
October 10, 2018 | Jen Judson

As the Army undergoes a major transformation, to include the activation of the brand new Army Futures Command, the service is attempting to bring requirements developers, the science and technology community, sustainers and logisticians closer together to more effectively modernize the force.

The Army's acquisition branch will play an important role in the effort to help adapt the Army to a new way of doing business.

Dr. Bruce Jette, the Army's acquisition chief, answered questions from Defense News on how the acquisition branch is playing a part in bringing an Army, that has struggled with procurement in the past, into the future.
